Description: "Veetch" was a clone stormtrooper in service to the Galactic Empire who operated on the planet Barton IV. After more than a year of being stationed at the planet's Imperial outpost, Veetch was killed in action by insurgents who terrorized the Imperial depot.

Biography

Sometime around 19 BBY, Veetch and his squad, under the command on Clone Commander Mayday, were assigned to guard an Imperial supply depot on the planet Barton IV. After more than a year of being stationed at the depot, the majority of Mayday's squad had been killed fighting off local insurgents, leaving behind Veetch, Hexx, and Mayday as the only surviving troopers by the time clone commando CT-9904 "Crosshair" and Imperial Lieutenant Nolan arrived to reinforce the squad around 18 BBY.

Veetch was sheltering inside of the Imperial depot along with trooper Hexx upon the arrival of Crosshair and Nolan. After a brief argument between Nolan and Mayday, the clone commander ordered Veetch and Hexx to help Nolan get situated within the depot, in which the two troopers obeyed. While Crosshair and Mayday were out surveying the depot's perimeter during a blizzard, the Imperial depot was attacked once more by the local insurgents. As he rushed to the depot's defense, Veetch was killed during the attack. Mayday would later retrieve his helmet and display it inside the Imperial depot along with the helmets of his other fallen brothers.

Personality and traits

As a clone of bounty hunter Jango Fett, Veetch was a human male that stood 1.83 meters tall and had tan skin.

Equipment

As a clone stormtrooper, Veetch was equipped with standard-issue Phase II clone trooper armor, and was armed with a DC-15A blaster carbine. After more than a year without maintenance or repair, Veetch's armor was broken and disheveled, and was loosely held together by cloth wrappings.
