Considered Extinct: The Tharnakan people after being forced to flee their homeworld due to the flooding became scattered and were considered extinct. A few scattered groups remained, but were rarely encountered.

Description: Tharnakans were sentient species from the planet Tharnaka. They were forced to flee their homeworld and subterranean dwellings when massive floods covered the surface of their world. After this disaster they became scatters and most considered the species to have gone extinct, leading to some plundering of their planet when the floods receded.
They tend to be a mild and considered species, with a great knowledge of their past and the disaster that has shaped their current situation.
