Description: Orla Jareni was an Umbaran female Jedi Master and Wayseeker during the time of the High Republic, operating independently of the Jedi High Council. As the Padawan of Jedi Master Laret Soveral, Jareni was involved in the Eiram–E'ronoh crisis. Twenty-five years later, she was one of four Jedi aboard the starship Vessel on a trip to the Starlight Beacon, having recently declared her status as a Wayseeker when the Great Hyperspace Disaster occurred. Nearly a year later and moving forward, she aided the Jedi of Starlight Beacon in personal, Drengir and Nihil related conflicts. She then helped Jedi Master Elzar Mann regain his mental balance after the Attack on Valo destabilized him, before her return with him to Starlight Beacon put her on the hunt for a dangerous, hidden threat. This threat unfortunately ended her life soon after. Many years later, her role and life would be forgotten by the Jedi Order, her file in the Jedi Archives remaining untouched until inquiries by a young Obi-Wan Kenobi rediscovered her life and story.

Personality and traits

As an Umbaran, Jareni had stark pale skin and high cheekbones common to her species. Her hair was drawn back into a smooth knot and was a silver nearly as dark as black.

Jareni, while dedicated to serving the Jedi Order as a whole, had private disagreements with the Jedi High Council, specifically regarding their emphasis on training and instruction. Jareni felt that this came at the expense of being open to Force-inspired instinct. In part, because of these disagreements, she opted to become a Wayseeker, taking on missions of her own rather than from the High Council. She was noted to have a sharp wit and a wry nature, as well as a blunt disposition. She rarely minced words, but never meant to be hurtful in what she said, only desiring to be honest and caring for those she spoke frankly with. Orla also believed strongly in the importance of balance near the end of her life, experiencing and commenting on the phenomena in her holorecording recovered from Lenahra and then again during and after her time with Elzar Mann. She also had a strong ability to read and understand others. However, one of her flaws was her anger. While her self control was great and she was able to often keep it in check, that control was significantly frayed in the final hours of her life due to the situation that plagued Starlight Beacon.

Powers and abilities

As a Jedi Master, Orla Jareni had a strong connection to the Force. Like many other Force-sensitives, with this connection, Jareni was granted many notable abilities. Jareni had demonstrated the ability to sense the energies of the Dark side of the Force. On the Amaxine station, she felt the cold chills and invasive visions associated with sensing powerful dark energies. Like most Jedi, Jareni could use the Force to jump many meters into the air with ease. She possessed the ability to slow blaster bolts midair, and her primal connection to the Force granted her a uniquely analytical mind when she focused. Before leaving the Amaxine station for the first time, she learned from Cohmac Vitus the binding ritual to bind the statues, completing the task with some exertion. She later assisted the meditation on the statues by joining minds with other Jedi on Coruscant in the Shrines in the Depths.

Jareni was skilled in the usage of a lightsaber. She fought off two Nihil warriors at once, using the Force to augment her reflexes, as well as combatted multiple Drengir effectively despite a physical injury and an unfamiliarity with the creatures. She additionally was a competent pilot, and had some familiarity with repairing a starship.

She also had the uncanny ability to avoid getting herself or her stark-white robes marred with dirt, grime, ash, and other similar substances. This fact was commented on by people around her.

Equipment

Jareni wore snowy robes. She wielded a white hinged double-bladed lightsaber. After the events on the Amaxine station, Jareni purchased a ship which she named the Lightseeker.
