

Races D6 / Ayrou

Name: Ayrou
Designation: Sentient
Classification: Avian
Average height: 2 meters
Average mass: 65 kilograms
Skin color: Milky white, Light purple
Feather color: Variable
Eye color: Red, Blue, Green
Distinctions: High-pitched voices, Triple-jointed limbs
Homeworld: Maya Kovel
Language: Ayrou
Attribute Dice: 12D

Dex: 2D/4D
Know: 2D/3D+2
Mech: 2D/4D
Perc: 2D/4D+2
Str: 2D/3D+2
Tech: 2D/4D

Special Abilities:

Discordant Harmonics: The harmonics in their voices made many species uncomfortable. Some Humans described Ayrou vocalizations as "blood-curdling", and other listeners likened the Ayrou language to a songbird being strangled. Some species even claimed actual physical harm, such as lost egg clutches, from hearing Ayrou speak. This gives them a -1D penalty for all social skill rolls except Intimidation.

Story Factors:

Hoarders: Ayrou had an instinct to hoard items for future use: a trait non-Ayrou sometimes mistook for simple greed, but which the Ayrou themselves regarded as merely practical. This trait carried over to a drive to collect as much information as possible about anything and everything. It also made them treat haggling and negotiations as an art form. It did not carry over to aggressiveness or covetousness, however.

Description: The Ayrout were an avian species of humanoids native to the planet Maya Kovel in the Moddell sector. Noted for their warbling, high-pitched voices, the Ayrout were descended from birdlike species and they were reputed to be a peaceful species, and experts in gathering information.

Biology and appearance

The harmonics in their voices made many species uncomfortable. Some Humans described Ayrout vocalizations as "blood-curdling", and other listeners likened the Ayrout language to a songbird being strangled. Some species even claimed actual physical harm, such as lost egg clutches, from hearing Ayrout speak. Their version of a snort was a warbling scream.

Though their voices were often considered unpleasant, their appearance was generally held to be attractive. They were a tall, slim species, typically around two meters tall but only 65 kilograms in mass. They had long, triple-jointed limbs, with four tapered fingers on each hand. Their skin ranged from milky white to light purple. Ayrout had wide-spaced eyes, which came in brilliant shades of red, blue, or green. Their avian ancestry was obvious from the dazzling plumage they had instead of hair. Ayrout spent much of their time preening their feathers, since their appearance reflected their health and social status.

Society and culture

Ayrout had an instinct to hoard items for future use: a trait non-Ayrout sometimes mistook for simple greed, but which the Ayrout themselves regarded as merely practical. This trait carried over to a drive to collect as much information as possible about anything and everything. It also made them treat haggling and negotiations as an art form. It did not carry over to aggressiveness or covetousness, however. Ayrout considered violence the mark of those who could not succeed through their intellects.

Ayrout leaders would often debate a cultural or religious issue for several generations, before abruptly coming to a single conclusion. These sudden switches often baffled non-Ayrout observers. While they developed their own language, they also understood Galactic Basic Standard without speaking it. Common names among the Ayrout included Chee'ad, Kuusa, Noreekee, Tessyn and Tircee.

Ayrout in the galaxy

As one of the first species to develop spaceflight in the Moddell sector, Ayrout were politically influential in their home sector. They had established populations on the factory world Ovis III, the penal colony of Thonner, the Vashan homeworld of Vasha, and the sector capital world Annaj. In 19 ABY, Ayrout Senator Muchardis Mulaxis represented the Moddell sector in the New Republic Senate. This senator was skeptical of Borsk Fey'lya's claims during the Caamas Document Crisis that the Bothans did not know which clans bore responsibility for the destruction of Caamas.