Background Information:
Jakre F. Ronnel, a.k.a. the Jackal, was a champion brawler at underground fighting matches held at various locations outside Chronum city limits. After several prosperous years of pit fighting, he began to use various types of advanced anabolic steroids in order to compensate for the influx of cybernetic fighters into the league. The drugs he used had been banned by several medical and drug associations due to their addictiveness and long term mental side effects. Months of overdose eventually caused him to go into violent rages, and on one particular night he killed four of his opponents in a free for all underground competition. After fleeing the scene and attacking a pursuing officer, he began to work as freelance muscle for hire. He is highly unstable (often to the point of making his employers nervous), and should be approached with extreme caution.
