Creatures D6 / Vrathean (Carnivorous Leviath

Name: Vrathean
Classification: Leviathan
Average height: 12.5 meters
Average length: 30.5 meters
Skin color: Brown, Cyan
Eye color: Purple
Distinctions: Bioluminescent carapace
Homeworld: Pabu
Habitat: Ocean
Diet: Carnivore

Dexterity: 3D
Perception: 1D
Strength: 5D

Special Abilities

Teeth: Vrathean have powerful jaws and can bite and hold their prey with amazing strength, their Teeth do Strength+2D Damage.

Massive Size: Vrathean are massive creatures, and are counted as Walker Scale in combat.

Tentacles: Vrathean have at least three Character Scale Tentacles they use to grab prey and maneuverer them into their mouth for eating. These tentacles can be damaged or destroyed separately to the creature, limiting it's capabilities.

Move: 17 (Swimming)
Orneriness: 4D

Description: Vratheans were a type of huge, tentacled, deep-sea leviathan with a bioluminescent carapace that lived in the oceans of the planet Pabu, rarely surfacing from the depths. Around 18 BBY, a vrathean attacked the Force-sensitive Asajj Ventress and the clone Omega while the pair were on a Pabu skiff testing Omega's m-count.

The creature capsized the skiff and grabbed Omega, who was rescued when Ventress cut off the vrathean's tentacle with her lightsaber. Omega's allies then opened fire on the creature from the attack shuttle Marauder, but Ventress had them stop and then calmed the vrathean with the Force, causing it to leave.

Description

The vrathean was a type of carnivorous leviathan found in the oceans of the planet Pabu. Preferring to dwell in the depths, it was rarely seen breaching the ocean's surface. Huge in size, they measured on average 12.5 meters in height and 30.5 meters in length with serpentine bodies with a thick, hardened shell plated carapace.

The carapace protruded out above the creature's face, protecting a boney beak with jagged toothed jaws between two large, plate-sized purple eyes with undulating black lines for pupils. The creatures possessed a mass of at least three tentacles made of hard flesh with countless suckers along the underside. A vrathean's skin was brown and bumpy with cyan patches and the creature's carapace was bioluminescent, shifting between brown, dark purple, and cyan across its surface. They could vocalize by bellowing, growling, and shrieking. Those who encountered a vrathean had to maintain a great sense of calm in order to escape alive.

History

Vrathean wrath

Around 18 BBY, the Force-sensitive Asajj Ventress took the clone Omega out onto Pabu's ocean in a Pabu skiff in order to test her m-count. To demonstrate the Force, Ventress reached out with it to all of the life around the vessel, causing a school of luminescent green rays to start circling the skiff. As Ventress ceased reaching out to them, the rays fled as a vrathean approached, briefly surfacing part of its carapace near the boat and then surfacing again to jostle the vessel and spin it around as the creature passed.

The vrathean then emerged more fully, its mouth dripping with glowing green flesh as it bellowed while facing the boat. Not having summoned the creature intentionally, Ventress started the boat's engine and circled around to try and escape, but the vrathean dived beneath the surface to puruse, raising two of its tentacles into the air and slamming them down behind the boat, causing waves to flip the boat over. Thrown into the water, Ventress and Omega quickly surfaced only for the clone to be grabbed by one of the vrathean's tentacles and pulled under. She pounded futilely with her fist on the creature's hard flesh which was less resistant to the blade of Ventress's lightsaber as she used it to slice off the vrathean's tentacle beneath where it had wrapped around Omega, leaving a bleeding stump.

A leviathan calmed

Ventress and Omega then surfaced, with the vrathean doing the same close behind as it roared and waved its tentacles in the air. Before it could attack again, it was hit by blaster fire from the Marauder, a Omicron-class attack shuttle operated by Omega's clone brethren Hunter, Wrecker and Crosshair, who had seen the vrathean attacking from a nearby island.

Distracted, the creature turned to try and follow the starship with its waving tentacles, but then turned to grab Ventress with a tentacle after the Force-user told Omega that she could handle the creature on her own. Omega then told the other clones to stop firing over comlink as Ventress reached out with the Force to calm the vrathean while it pulled her toward its gaping jaws. As she reached the mouth, Ventress placed her hand upon it and the creature stilled, its eyes widening. Cyan light pulsed across its shell as it slowly lowered Ventress back onto her ship before sinking beneath the waves to swim away. Ventress and Omega then safely departed in the Marauder.

Stats by FreddyB, Descriptive Text from WookieePedia.
Image copyright LucasArts.
Any complaints, writs for copyright abuse, etc should be addressed to the Webmaster FreddyB.