Creatures D6 / Faendor Thressal

Faendor Thressal

The Thressal is a seperate species yet a seperate gender at the same time. They and the Rioles are both like this. The Rioles are the Male Gender while the Thressals are the Female Gender, yet both are distinctly different species. They mate and females are Thressal and Male are Riole, scientists aren't quite sure how this happened.

The Thressal is one of the fastest creatures in the known galaxy with a max speed of aproximately 106 kilometers per hour, able to outrun some vehicles. They aslo have the widest transportation range among any of the Faendor animals suggesting the two are related.

- Transportation: Many of the creatures on the world of Faendor have developed this strange mode of transportation. It allows them to seemingly instantly transport from one spot to another spot nearby. It's not quite known how this works but it is beleived it isn't actual teleportation as they cannot move through solid objects, thusly they cannot just transport themselves outside of a room unless there's an opening they could normaly fit through. They use this short distances to Dodge, hence their high dodge skills, or as actual movement. If they use it as actual movement they may make no other movements this round and the movement counts as an action.
